

Bias Detection Report

The analysis of the relationship between the reason for school choice and mother's education level indicates a low level of correlation bias.

The maximum absolute mean and standardized difference both suggest a Level 2 bias, which is considered low.

The Cohen's D method was not applicable due to the categorical feature having more than two categories.

Overall, the bias level is categorized as Level 2, indicating a low level of bias in the dataset.