

Bias Detection Report

The results suggest that students who are not in a romantic relationship tend to have higher average grades.

This could indicate a trend where being in a romantic relationship has a negative effect on student performance.

The standard deviation of grades for students in a romantic relationship is slightly higher, indicating a slight increase in grade variability.